Cute crafts

Teddy bears, bunnies and geese were popular themes at the arts and crafts show hosted by the St. Aloysius Parents Club Saturday. Woodwork, baskets, quilts and needlework were also on display. Parents use profits for the show to purchase supplies for the school. Money from the 1989 event went toward three new computers. Stuffed animals like those displayed by artist Mike Hannah (above) were a hit, especially with young viewers like Jamie Billings (left), 6. ANP photos by Patricia Douglas

Defendants in burn case face trial this week

Trial proceedings began Monday for the two men charged with splashing a Taylor woman with gasoline last summer and setting her on fire.

Monday and Tuesday were spent on jury selection in the trial of Brownstown Township residents James Camilli, 39, and Vester Lee Mills, 24. Separate juries were to be formed for each defendant.

Romulus police officials said proceedings were almost delayed Monday when defense attorneys requested a change of venue.

The attorneys said the extensive publicity this case received would make finding an impartial jury in this area nearly impossible. An article about the 19-year-old victim, Kristen Grauman, had appeared in the Detroit Free Press Magazine one day before the defendants' trial, the attorneys added.

Grauman, who suffered burns over 60 percent of her body, had spent months in the University of Michigan Medical Center undergoing skin grafts and battling an infection resulting from the burns.

Recorder's Court Judge Edward Thomas denied the change of venue request.

According to testimony from the preliminary examination for Mills and father-in-law

Camilli, the men reportedly went to a Taylor apartment complex the night of the burning to search for Camilli's girlfriend.

While there, the men allegedly became involved in an altercation with several men at the complex. Eventually, testimony states, these men smashed in nearly all of the windows on Camilli's car.

Intent on revenge, the men reportedly filled a pop bottle with gasoline at a Taylor gas station.

On the way back to the complex, they came across Grauman, who allegedly agreed to show the men where they could find a $50 rock of cocaine.

Preliminary examination testimony varies at this point. One report from a defendant claims Grauman accidentally splashed herself with gasoline in the car. In police interviews Mills said he burned his hand trying to stop her from escaping the vehicle.

Another witness testified Camilli claimed Mills splashed Grauman with the gasoline. Camill reportedly claimed the men chose the woman as a target for their anger.

During the trial at the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice, Grauman is expected to take the stand to present her version of that night.

program last year because of repair problems in the school building and the presence of asbestos, a suspected cancer-causing agent.

Claiming repairs would be too costly, district officials announced plans to demolish the building by this summer.

Since that announcement, the building has been a subject of argument. One group of residents has petitioned to save South and transform it into a community center. The building ties into city history, the residents said, and the city needs a recreation facility.

Other residents have condemned the community center idea, claiming neither the city

Women help nab robbery suspects

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

With the help of three local women, Romulus police officers arrested three armed robbery suspects March 13.

Charged with the armed robbery of a gas station at Wayne Road and Ecorte are Detroit residents Michael Merritt, 20, Daron Trotter, 19, and Marshall Ross, 19.

The defendants were arraigned March 14 before Judge Henry Zaborowski in the 34th District Court. Merritt was charged with felony firearm in addition to armed robbery.

Each of the defendants pleaded not guilty.

Bond was set at $10,000. The defendants awaited their March 21 preliminary examination from Wayne County jail.

Romulus police officials said the robbery was reported at 11:26 p.m. Two men had approached the gas station on foot, claiming they needed a gas can.

One of the men then pulled a handgun on the attendant, police reports state. The other man reportedly opened a gym bag and told the attendant to fill it with money from the cash register. The attendant complied.

During this process, police said, three passing citizens saw the suspects and realized a robbery was in progress. They watched as the suspects ran from the station on foot to a U-Haul truck parked nearby.

The witnesses followed the truck as it drove north on Wayne Road until they were able to copy the license plate number. They then called the police with the information.

Shortly after the description was broadcast over police radios, an officer spotted the suspects at Beverly Road and Merriman. The truck was stopped at Merriman Road and Van Born.

Police said a handgun and $100 in cash was found with the suspects.

Board of education members approved the bid request last week, claiming the building will have to be destroyed if attempts to sell the deserted school are unsuccessful.

The South Middle School building once served as the first Romulus high school, serving grades seven through 12. Most recently, it housed the Beacon Day Treatment program, which serves emotionally impaired students.

District officials refused to continue hosting the regional

School fire is reported

Romulus firefighters were called to Romulus Senior High School Monday afternoon when a small fire broke out in an athletic lavatory.

Principal Thomas Dolan said the fire was limited to some toilet paper stored in the room.

The room filled with smoke, he said, but there were no flames.

School officials said they believe the fire was deliberately set, but they have no suspects in mind.

No damage, except to the toilet paper, was reported Dolan said. No one was injured.

Fire officials arrived at the scene at approximately 3:30 p.m. and were able to extinguish the fire quickly, according to reports.

Policies are approved for teen health center

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

A policy outline has been approved for the Romulus Adolescent Health Center, which is now expected to open early next month.

Members of the advisory committee for the health center submitted their policy outline to the Romulus board of education for approval last week.

The facility, which will be located within Romulus Senior High School, will serve local residents, junior and senior high school ages. Enrollment in Romulus schools is not a requirement for treatment.

Basic health care, vision and hearing tests, immunizations, counseling and pregnancy testing will be available.

Referrals to health care providers or agencies will be permitted, according to the new policy outline.

Before the facility received school board approval, the health center proposal drew fire from local residents who said it would become a source of birth control and abortion referrals for teens.

Members of the center planning committee have insisted those services will not be offered. State law, they said, forbids referrals for abortion services or counseling.

Referrals to health care providers or agencies will, however, be permitted, according to the new policy outline.

In addition, RAHC employees can refer people to Wayne County Health Department Clinics or Heritage Hospital in Taylor for services or diagnostic testing that cannot be performed at the health center.

The outline also offers confidentiality, another source of parent debate.

Health center staff members can provide teens confidential services for mental health and the treatment of sexually transmitted diseases, according to state law.

No information from clinical records will be released without written permission from the patient.

For minors, parent or guardian signatures will also be required, except when the records concern one of the confidential services listed above.

The policy outline does permit research at the health center, but states health and counseling services will be first priorities.

"A key principle in evaluating proposed research efforts is that they should not significantly dilute the ability of the RAHC to provide direct services to enrollees," the outline reads.

Also required for research projects are confidentiality and informed participant consent.

For more information about the health center, call 941-2170, extension 26.

ROMULUS NEWS DIGEST

Student count shows increase

The unofficial fourth Friday count for Romulus Community Schools shows an increase in February by 23 students.

The highest increases were seen at the high school level. Twenty-seven new students since the January count were listed. An increase of four was recorded at the junior high school.

Balancing out the increases somewhat was a decrease at the elementary school level by eight.

School board members honored

Romulus board of education members were honored by two educational organizations in past weeks.

The Wayne County Association of School Boards presented five Romulus board members with certificates of achievement — Daniel Bales, Kenneth Berlinn, Mary King, Sandra Langley, Pat Patterson and Edward Wilkerson. These members have served on the board five or more years.

In addition, officials from the Michigan Association of School Boards announced recently the Romulus board will receive a standard of excellence award.

The board is eligible for this honor because more than half of the members are eligible for an award of merit.

Grant money used for study

A $50,000 state grant will be used for a restructuring study by Romulus Community Schools.

District officials this school year requested $180,000 from the state to study building needs and grade structures. The district received $50,000 from the state.

Last week Superintendent William Bedell presented a revised budget for a study to school board members, proposing a detailed study of the district. Board members approved the project.

In this restructuring study a paid school improvement team will look at the existing educational system used by the district and consider methods to improve it. The study will enlist the help of consultants, and members of the improvement team will attend a retreat to review their goals.

The proposal for this study calls for input from students, school staff members and local residents.

Commission officer appointed

Sheldon Chandler earlier this month was appointed vice chairman of the Romulus Planning Commission.

Chandler is filling the position of Duwayne Martin, who resigned from the commission in late February.

Commission members voted unanimously in favor of Chandler's appointment.

nor the school district could afford such a project. Meanwhile, the empty building threatens to lower the value of nearby homes, they said.

Currently, the fate of the building remains in the air. City officials last month circulated a survey among residents, asking if they would be willing to pay additional tax dollars to revamp the school. The survey also asks what kind of recreation activities residents need.

Depending on the survey results, city officials said they may put a recreation millage proposal on an election ballot.

An additional option for the building also remains open — selling it. District officials earlier this year put the building on the market. A recent report from the district financial committee sounds hopeful.

"The U.S. Army has showed interest in this facility. They have been given 120 days to leave the Woodhaven Junior High School," the report read.

Adoption was last hope for greyhound

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

If they are not profitable for their owners, most racing greyhounds are killed by age two, one animal rights group claims.

The successful racers are killed when they are five.

When Romulus resident Debbie Pitel read those figures in a dog magazine last year, she was infuriated. The organization that released the information, Retired Greyhounds As Pets, said even the dogs who are kept alive have a rough time. The animals are cramped in cages, released only to relieve themselves or race, according to REGAP.

For Pitel, that information was enough. She and her family contacted the Indiana REGAP office and adopted a 2-year-old female named Cleopatra one month later. Apparently, Cleopatra's owner rejected her after losing too many races.

"She was scared of every single thing," Pitel said, recalling Cleopatra's introduction to family life. "It took her two days to learn what glass was. It's like bringing in a full-grown puppy."

Because Cleopatra had never been treated like a pet, Pitel said, she didn't know how to play when they adopted her.

"The racing industry considers greyhounds commercial animals like cattle or sheep," a REGAP flyer states, adding the racers are treated only as investments.

During her first month in a home setting, Cleopatra hid in Debbie and John Pitel's bedroom, shying away from most people and the other family dog.

Now at age three, Cleopatra is a member of the family. She has remained cautious with strangers, Pitel said.

"It took her a long time to come out of her shyness."

Another challenge the Pitels had to deal with is that live animals are still used to train or "bloody" the racing greyhounds. The animals are tied to a miniature monorail along the race course, and the greyhounds chase it. Old habits die hard.

When Cleopatra met Justin Pitel's pet rabbit she gave that bunny the workout of a lifetime in the back yard. Pitel said the rabbit was unharmed, but Justin was a wreck.

Because retired greyhounds never had a chance to be puppies, they need extra patience when they're adopted, Pitel said. REGAP suggests cautious, supervised introductions to all children and other pets in the home.

The organization takes a firm

Retirement from the race track leaves greyhounds with two potential futures, death or adoption. When the Pitel family (left) read that 50,000 greyhounds are destroyed each year as they stop creating a profit for their owners, they decided to rescue a dog through adoption. Cleopatra (above) came to Romulus through an Indiana rescue organization. In her new family are John, Debbie, Justin and Misty. ANP photos by Werner Slocum/staff photographer mer stand on other greyhound necessities. Adoptive "parents" must have a fenced in back yard for the dog to run in. Greyhounds can reach speeds of 55 miles per hour, Pitel said. After years in a tiny cage, freedom to move is the ultimate gift to these animals.

People are also asked to keep the dogs in their homes when playtime is over. With very little body fat, greyhounds are susceptible to cold temperatures.

Pitel said adoption does cost between $125 to $150. All of the money goes toward shots and other veterinarian fees.

Now that Cleopatra is a member of the family, Pitel said the dog's personality is starting to show.

"They're as smart as they can be," she said, coaxing Cleopatra to speak.

The dog received a chocolate cookie as reward.

For more information about REGAP, write Sally Allen,

P.O. Box 111, Camby, Indiana, 46113 or call (317) 996-2154.

Pitel said Allen is compiling a petition against proposals to legalize greyhound racing in Indiana. (The event currently is legal in 18 states). Allen is asking people who cannot adopt a greyhound to write her to support her petition.

Tax assessment season is in full force

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

As if approaching income tax deadlines were not bad enough, property evaluation notices have been effectively souring the moods of area residents this month.

Romulus Assessor Matthew Raftary sent residents a letter several weeks ago explaining the evaluation process. He announced a five percent property value increase on the average.

Raftary said property taxes are based on a state equalized value, half the market value of the property.

The other factor determining the bottom line is the community millage rate. A mill is equal to $1 in taxes for every $1,000 in assessed valuation.

The standard tax formula, then, is SEV divided by 1,000 and then multiplied by the community millage rate.

For example, a home valued at $45,000 on the market would have an SEV of $22,500. Divided by 1,000, that figure comes to 22.5.

Multiply 2.5 by the 1989 local millage rate, 71.25, and the tax bill comes to $1,603.12.

Romulus is not the only entity collecting from that bill. Local taxpayers also pay a millage rate for the school district, Wayne County, Wayne County Intermediate School District, Wayne County Community College and Wayne County Metro Parks.

City officials said angry residents calling about their tax bill usually look first at the bottom line, not at the taxing entities and the rates they charge.

The 1989 millage rate for the city of Romulus was 10.87. Romulus Community Schools levied 49.15 mills that year. The county rate was 11.23.

A new curriculum was approved last week for Romulus Senior High School.

School officials said few changes were made from the 1989/90 school year.

For the math department, the math exploration program was eliminated. Department representatives said the course was redundant with existing classes for students with low or weak math skills.

The business department saw several changes. Eleventh- and 12th-grade students can now enroll in the introduction to hospitality

County parks plan announced

By PATRICIA BROWN
ANP Staff Writer

Within the next year or so, canoeing on the Rouge River will become a reality. Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara announced Tuesday a plan to restore the entire 75-year-old county parks system.

The county will not be totally funding the revitalization effort, according to McNamara. Most of the funds will come from Friends of Wayne County Parks Foundation through fund-raising efforts.

"Each year it becomes more evident that Wayne County government cannot continue to support all the needs of its citizens without further exploration of alternate funding sources," McNamara said.

Principal's award given

The St. Aloysius Principal's Award is being given to fourth-through eighth-grade students who have shown outstanding improvement during the school year.

The following students received this award for the second marking period: Adam Troia, a fifth grader; Heather Krey, a seventh grader and Christina Tatomer an eighth grader.

Boot camp is approved

The assistant superintendent of Romulus Community Schools, Terrel M. LeCesne, has recommended that the board of education approve a proposed field trip for student/cadets in the Navy Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Forty cadets are to participate in the proposed mini boot camp at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill. during the spring recess, April 16 through 20.

Four chaperones will accompany the cadets on a chartered bus to Great Lakes.

Career day has become a traditional event in Romulus at the high school, but last week younger students had an opportunity to participate.

Seventh- and eighth-graders met with scientists, lawyers, a psychologist, a stewardess, school administrators, army and marine recruiters, a chef and city officials. A total of 31 speakers attended the career day event.

The event marked the first career day for Romulus Junior High School, said principal Jessie Meriweather.

"It's working out real well," he said. "I wanted the kids out there to be exposed to careers early in life."

Students today tend to be skeptical when teachers warn them about attendance or class performance, Meriweather said. They ask when they possibly would need algebra or geography in the "real world."

Meriweather said he hopes the message will sink in when students listen to people who are already working in the real world. One of the speakers, a stewardess for Northwest Airlines, told students tardiness is more than a red mark in the attendance book for her. It could mean losing her job.

For other students, the principal continued, the glamour associated with some jobs may fade. Too many students decide they want a career that sounds like fun without taking a close look, he said.

Vernon Payne, a counselor for Western Michigan University, said college preparation begins in the ninth grade, making middle school a perfect time to begin thinking about careers. He said the students he spoke with were quick to ask questions.

Laurie Klemczak, an education coordinator at Henry Ford Hospital, said preparation was not the only thing students asked about. They wanted to know about day-to-day work in nursing.

"How to handle working with a really sick person? What's it like in surgery?"

"I liked it," said seventh-grader Manning Taylor at the end of the day. "The engineers interest me the most."

"It explained the fields I want to get into," said eighth-grade student Bret Smith who listened to two attorneys and an armed forces recruiter.

Each of the students were given a list of speakers and listened to their top three choices.

Meriweather said he began thinking about a career day last year. He approached a group of counselors with the idea in the fall, and they have been planning for the event ever since.

"We tried to get people who work in Romulus. People the kids knew."

Career day coordinators include Linda Bradfield, Linda Cook, Debbie Juriga, Dorothy Ogletree and Avern Logan.

For weeks, Stacie Brown has been alternating from terrified to excited every few minutes.

When the Romulus high school junior agreed to apply for a student-exchange scholarship last fall she really did not expect to win.

Now Brown is planning for a summer trip to Finland and buying "teach yourself" language tapes.

"I'm excited but scared. I've never even been on an airplane before," said Brown, whose trip will be funded through the Youth For Understanding Program.

During the application process, Brown participated in private and group interviews with YFU officials and past scholarship participants.

Stacie Brown

"They asked how I would spend my free-time, if I could handle the public transportation system. They wanted to know if I could get around on my own."

One of the interviewers who traveled to Finland several years ago warned Brown about the popularity of saunas in that country. Most people use them in the nude, she said. Apparently, Brown reddened a bit.

"I don't know what my reaction was, but they all cracked up."

Brown, vice president of the local Students Against Drunk Driving Chapter, said her involvement with student groups may have worked in her favor. She learned several weeks ago she is one of two Michigan students to receive the YFU scholarship. Ten student recipients were selected nationwide.

"The first thing I thought was I have to get back and tell Mr. Hurst," Brown said.

Dan Hurst is the Romulus

Senior High School counselor who recommended Brown apply for the scholarship. Brown thinks he was more excited about her acceptance than she was.

Now she knows she is going to Finland, Brown is trying to learn as much as she can about the country. Finland will see daylight 24 hours a day during her visit. That factor, along with a summer of cool weather, will be a bit strange at first, she said.

"One of my teachers told me most of the teens there speak some English, that will help."

Brown will live with a host family during her trip, but their identity will not be revealed until two weeks before she leaves in June. YFU officials spend the time finding compatible matches, she said.

The first few days of the trip will be spent in Washington D.C. where the students will have a crash course in Finnish. They will leave the country June 28 and return in August.

"It's like a big challenge. I always like meeting new people. What better way than to go to a country where I don't know anyone," Brown said. "Just a week ago it clicked. I'm going to another country. Before I was thinking of it as a vacation. I'm expecting a lot of different things."

As much as she wants to learn, Brown said she also wants to answer questions about the United States. She thinks most people perceive American teens as violent people who abuse drugs or alcohol.

"I hope they do ask a lot of questions so I can let them know... We're not as bad as they think we are."

Plans for family center progress

By PATRICIA BROWN
ANP Staff Writer

Members of the Homeless Advisory Council met last week to discuss applications for grants to help with the new Family Center planned for the Eloise property.

The Family Center will be located on the second floor of an existing building on the Eloise property located on the northeast corner of Merriman and Michigan Avenue.

Wayne County engineers are working on the preliminary drawings for the center before an architect is hired for the project. Wayne-Metropolitan Community Services Agency Director Jack Schwab said the building will have to be changed to give the entrance more of a "human touch."

"We want it to look like a home," Schwab said.

"So often when people think of a shelter, they think of beds all lined up in a row," he added.

From now on Schwab said he wants the facility for homeless in Westland to be referred to as the Family Center, rather than a homeless shelter.

The Family Center will also be designed to accommodate handicapped individuals.

"Everyone coming into the facility will be trained in the handling of everybody, whether they are handicapped or not," said Joseph Benyo, Westland consultant and council member.

Benyo said they needed to make sure anyone using the shelter could escape in case of fire or other emergency.

Once the Family Center opens its doors, children occupying the center will be going to Wayne-Westland schools. Schwab said he discussed education plans with Elliot Elementary School principal, Dr. Jose Muller. Muller is checking into what will be required by the Michigan Department of Education.

Pysanky

Simplicity of design, symbolism and brilliant colors combine to form what is known as the Ukrainian art of Pysanky.

The art is now passed along by the few masters to their children and to anyone else who is anxious to carry on the tradition.

Pysanky is the art of decorating eggs or writing on eggs.

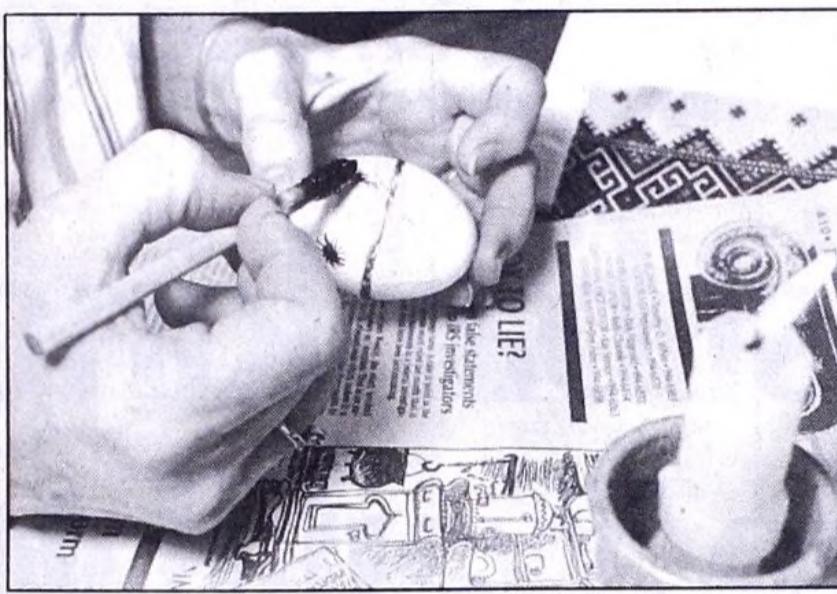

"These eggs will never be old-fashioned. They will fit in anywhere," said Cecelia Ference whose steady hand has created many works of art.

Ference, who is always anxious to pass along the art of Pysanky, recently taught a class through the Wayne-Westland Community Schools Leisure Program. With wide eyes, students studied the intricate details of Ference's eggs and wondered how they would create such treats for the eye.

It takes a steady hand and much practice to achieve the level of skill of Ference.

A special tool called a kistka is heated over a flame and then placed in bee's wax. The tool is then used to draw designs in bee's wax on the egg. The areas that are covered with wax to start will remain white throughout the entire dying process. As the egg is submerged in dye (lightest color to the darkest color) more areas are covered in wax protecting them from the darker color dye.

The colorful eggs were presented at church on Easter as part of Ukrainian custom. Many tales were told to explain their beginnings, Ference said. There was the tale of Mother Mary, whose tears fell on a basket of plain eggs, at the time Jesus was crucified, and when someone looked in the basket they were plain no longer, Ference writes in her book.

The intricate designs are drawn onto the eggs using bee's wax and a special writing tool. Ference makes the tools herself, just like her father taught her. Many of the symbols and drawings on the eggs have religious meanings. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer

Area resident to present art class at Belleville gallery

By JOAN DYER-ZINNER
Belleville City Editor

Art instructor Dorothy Rafelli Stockbridge teaches her students to "breathe life" into their works.

Stockbridge, a former Wayne resident, will share her techniques on creating more realistic drawings in a March 24 workshop, "Likenesses in Charcoal," at the Bentley Gallery, in Belleville.

"In painting or drawing babies and young children, for example, artists can breathe life into their works by making the eyes look as if they can see and the mouth look as if it can speak," Stockbridge said. "I've painted for many years and developed a lot of insights through my own experiences. It is these techniques that I want to share with workshop participants."

During the workshop, Stockbridge plans to present tips on successful portraiture. Her topics will include how to depict light hair in a dark medium and how to capture the expressions of babies and small youngsters. Stockbridge also will illustrate the anatomical changes that cause faces to look older or younger.

The workshop will be geared to artists and art students, not to beginners, said Stockbridge, a 1950 graduate of Wayne High School.

"I've taught hundreds and hundreds of classes," Stockbridge said. "And, I've painted a variety of subjects. My favorites are people of all kinds, the great cats and, especially, children."

Stockbridge has had a long career as a portraitist. She studied with Owen Brainard, Michigan State University professor of art, and with portraitist J. Lawton Shieran.

The Michigan artist has painted portraits of former President Gerald Ford, Sen. Edward (Ted) Kennedy, Sen. John Warner, Congressman Carl Pursell, former Gov. William Milliken, Secretary of State Richard Austin and state Sen. Lana Pollock. Her official portrait of John Swainson, former governor and deputy chief justice, hangs in the Michigan Supreme Court.

Information about the workshop is available by calling the Bentley Gallery, 697-6441, or visiting the site at 9475 Morton-Taylor Road, at Tyler Road, Belleville.

County amendment is eyed

By JOHN AGGE
ANP Staff Writer

A public hearing will be staged from 7 to 9 p.m. April 3 at the Westland Friendship Center, 1119 Newburgh, to discuss a proposed county charter amendment requiring an elected replacement for the county executive position in the event of a mid-term vacancy.

Wayne County Commissioner Kay Beard, whose district includes Garden City, Inkster and Westland, and fellow commissioners Arthur Blackwell and Bernard Kilpatrick have authored an amendment for voters' approval mandating a special election for the office of county executive should a vacancy in the office occur.

Rumors of a possible midterm vacancy of the county executive office have abounded of late amid speculation of Executive Edward McNamara's aspirations for the state Governor's office.

If approved by voters, the proposed ballot question would include in the county charter a requirement that a special election be held in the event the county executive post becomes vacant as a result of a mid-term resignation, recall, permanent incapacity or death.

Under the current county charter, the deputy county executive would assume the duties of the executive until the next regular election should a vacancy occur.

Beard believes the current line of succession to the office does not best serve the voters.

The new proposal calls for special primary and general elections for the executive position within 90 days of the mid-term vacancy.

A temporary county executive would be selected by the county commissioners to run the county before the special election.

Executive makes plans

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara announced Saturday that he is committed to his post in county government, and has no immediate political ambitions to distract him.

McNamara said he would seek another term as county chief, and would fulfill that term in office.

This announcement came amidst rumors that McNamara would leave office mid-term to pursue the governor's post in 1994.

Teens are in need of homes

By JOAN DYER-ZINNER
Belleville City Editor

Although the atmosphere is "homey" for the teens who dwell at Girlstown Foundation, in Belleville, its young residents would prefer the family atmosphere of a foster home.

"We've got some terrific girls here. I'd match them against any teens," said staff member Garland Rogers. "Our residence is as home-like as possible, but it's natural that the girls want their own homes and families."

Because of the need for foster homes, the staff of Girlstown has launched a campaign to find foster parents for the girls, between the ages of 13 and 17, who reside in the facility.

Girlstown has a long history in western Wayne County, beginning with its establishment 32 years ago as an outreach of the General Federated Women's Club. The original site in downtown Belleville burned, and the current facility, on Quirk Road, was constructed in 1973 to house 12 girls. In addition, four girls reside in a "supervised independent living" program at an area apartment complex, while four others reside in a group home. Currently, a total of 20 girls, between the ages of 13 and 17, resident in the three settings. The typical stay is about one year, said staff members.

The residents attend school in the Van Buren School District and blend into the community as much as possible in order to be a part of the community, said a Girlstown spokesman. The girls participate in school and community activities and also attend enrichment classes at the facility.

Members of the community also have become involved in Girlstown through in-house services and donations.

"We can use donations of furniture for the apartment and donations of lawn care and roofing, for example," Rogers said. "If people in the area have something they think we can use, they can give us a call."

However, of all the needs of the residents of Girlstown, the most pressing one is for foster homes, said staff member Joe Dula.

"We need people from anywhere in western Wayne County who have good parenting skills. They should be people who know how to deal with teens and also have empathy for girls who are dealing with some extra issues above those usually experienced by teens — neglect, abuse and loss of self-esteem, for example," Dula said.

"We want prospective foster parents to be realistic and understand the problems they will face, but we also want them to understand that they will have training and a support system provided."

Because many of the residents are victims of neglect, abuse or other serious problems in their families, they do not have an appropriate environment to return to following their stay at Girlstown. Consequently, there is a need for foster families to bridge the gap from their adolescence to their adult years.

People who are interested in providing foster homes for teens may contact Girlstown at 699-7242.

Everyone will count in the 1990 U.S. Census

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Dwight Dean, regional director of the Bureau of Census, has a message for every citizen — you count.

And if residents aren't counted in the 1990 census communities may literally lose millions of dollars in federal and state revenue sharing funds.

"Let me make these two points clear," Dean informed a group of elected officials at a Wayne County census awareness program, "the census means power and money. It is enormously important to the communities because an undercount of population would mean the loss of federal funds."

Making an appearance March 16 before some of the chief elected officials of Wayne County, Dean joined Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara in launching a countywide effort to increase the awareness among county residents on the importance of the 1990 census.

Dwight Dean
regional director
U.S. Census Bureau

McNamara designated March 19 through 25 as "Wayne County Counts Week".

Dean explained that because population determines the number of representatives a state will send to Congress, and that the loss or gain of population will create the need of redistricting counts.

McNamara informed the audience that if the county had an undercount of 1 percent, the county would lose an estimated $3.5 million annually in federal funds.

"Moreover, if you figure that the next census would not take place until the year 2000, you could see the impact it would have. Therefore, it is incumbent upon our people to get counted," the county executive stressed.

In a press release from the county executive office, McNamara stated the census awareness program is being spearheaded by a 206-person Wayne County Counts Committee made up of the county Board of Commissioners, business, civic and religious leaders and local congressmen and state legislators.

"We've assembled an impressive committee," McNamara stated. "Our charge is to ensure that every person in Wayne County is counted in Wayne County."

One of the largest counties in the nation — ranked fifth in the nation in population, Wayne County presently boasts 2.2 million residents.

In conjunction with "Wayne County Counts Week", the committee is organizing several census awareness activities throughout the county.

counting each and every citizen."

The U.S. Constitution mandates a census every 10 years to apportion representatives among the states, and the apportionment determines how many congressional representatives each state will have.

"This is the 21st time this nation has taken a census," Dean added. "No other nation on the face of this earth can boast this record. And the census reflects our own personality as a nation. It tells of our roots."

Although the census count begins April 1, the field work isn't expected to be completed until October 1990. On December 31, the Census Bureau will deliver all apportionment counts to the President, while April 1, 1991 is the deadline for all states to receive redistricting counts.

Opinion

Everyone counts in the census

Next week, every Wayne County household will receive a questionnaire from the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

Completion of that form can mean added funds for your community, much needed road repairs and can determine the level of representation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

So, stand up and be counted Wayne County.

It is important to the welfare of your community.

The census questionnaire should only take a few minutes to complete, according to officials with the census bureau. It will be a few minutes well spent.

The United States is the only nation in the world that mandates a count of citizens which includes information about income, nationality and profession.

The census data helps to paint a picture of our nation that can be called up at any point in the future and reviewed. Past census studies indicate to us the makeup of our country and individual communities with more detail and accuracy than would be possible through any other means.

This information is gathered, stored, compared and evaluated. It is considered with microscopic attention to detail.

And yet, the information you place on the census questionnaire is completely confidential. Names are eventually detached from the information submitted. The responses are studied and comparisons and results are released as requested, but the names of those responding to the census are kept in total confidence, according to census guidelines.

Residents therefore should not fear that their names will end up on mailing lists or bill collections lists after responding to the census questionnaire.

Information presented on the questionnaires will be compiled by census workers, and then will be presented to the president of the United States. From there the facts and figures are used to determine funding allocations for federal road funds and grants. They are also used to determine how many representatives a state is eligible to send to the House of Representatives.

The information is very important to you and your neighbors. The census forms are not silly questionnaires to determine consumer preferences or to lure you into purchasing magazine subscriptions.

The census rather is a critical government survey which will directly affect you.

So take the time, and stand up and be counted.

Farewell to a good friend

The city of Wayne will say farewell during the coming weeks to a business and a businessman that have become landmarks.

Marvin Kahn, owner of Stuart's in Wayne, will leave the women's apparel business next month after 42 years.

His successful clothing store has been a drawing card for the city of Wayne for many years, and continues to attract a stream of loyal customers.

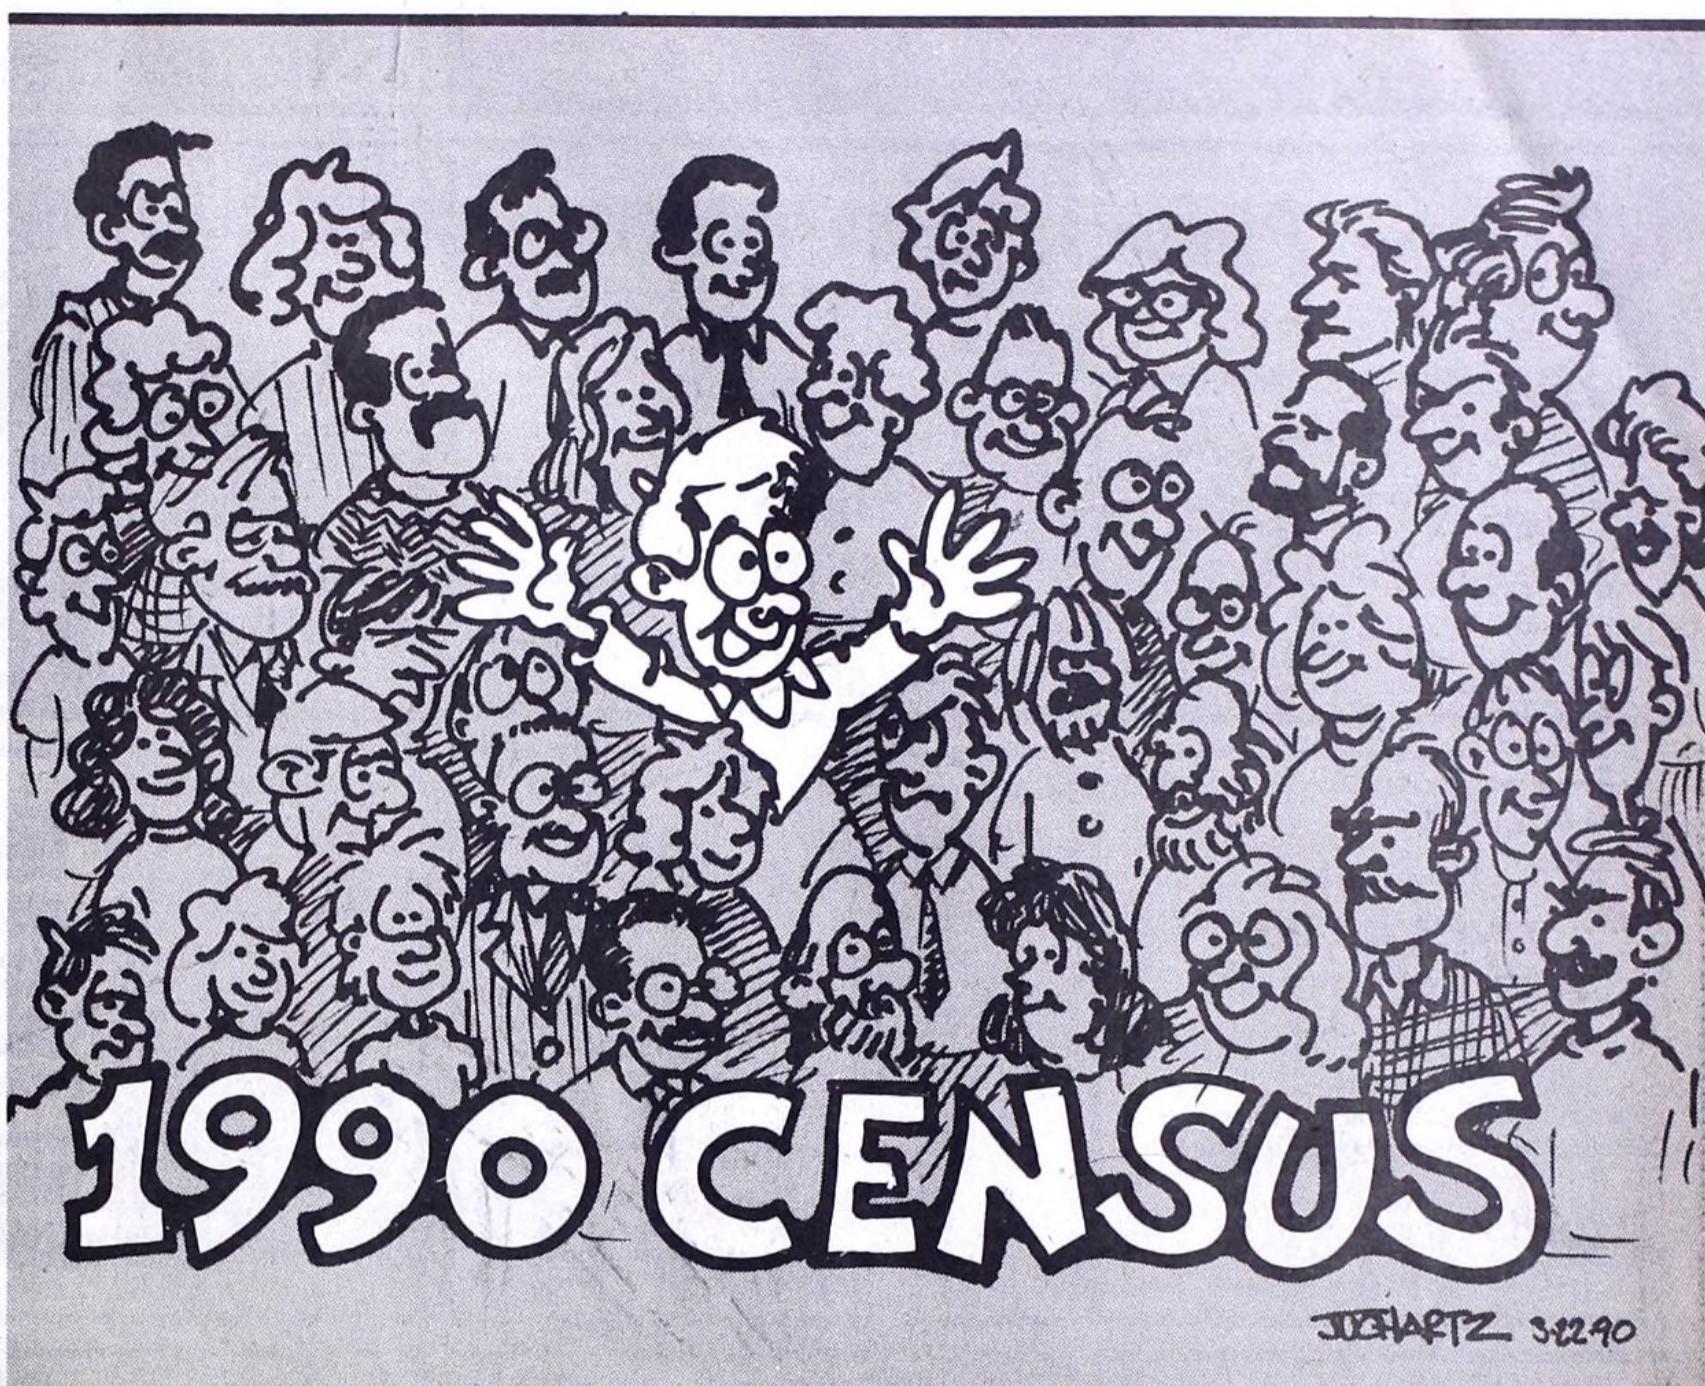

Kahn, however, has decided it is time to move on. At age 73, he hopes to pursue his jazz career and enjoy life.

He deserves the break, and we wish him the best of luck.

Mr. Kahn has been a devoted supporter of downtown Wayne. As his own business died down due to expanded retail growth near Westland Center, Kahn stuck it out remaining true to the community.

Kahn and his father started the business together and at one time had three stores in the area. They worked tirelessly to promote their business and they were successful.

To Mr. Kahn we say keep going strong and playing your music. It will keep you young.

City games in Inkster

Are you concerned with all that is happening in Inkster; not just with drugs but with all the other games city officials are playing these days?

Are you concerned when the mayor and councilmen say we can hire and fire the city manager and apparently do many other things without being accountable?

Not to worry, the day of reckoning will come. When the next election comes. When you as an American citizen living in a democracy, exercise your right and privilege to vote and make sure that who you vote for will be accountable for their actions and truly represent you.

Authority is great, but it has its responsibilities (explaining their actions to concerned citizens) as well as privileges (hiring and firing).

Let's hope they get their priorities in line soon.

Fabrication is evident

In a recent issue of the Romulus Roman there were two articles concerning the abortion issue; one aimed at parental consent, the other aimed at name-calling. I should like to mention a few points of interest.

LETTERS

(1) the fabricated 70 percent of abortions done on minors having parental consent is just that fabricated. If this were the case, pro-choicers would voice no objections; the ACLU would jump in as they are known for their support of minorities. No where does this article state that less than 1 percent of abortions are solicited because of rape and the 98 percent of all abortions are done for social (convenient) reasons. I believe everyone should bear in mind that the state should in no way undermine parental rights or expect a child to think like an adult simply because she conceives. Why should the abortion issue be any different than anything else concerning parents and their children? It shouldn't.

Regarding the article (editorial) that states we should leave the abortion issue alone, I should like to remind the writer of something. It was for this very same reason that the abortion issue came into being. When Roe v. Wade came into existence, people were either not totally aware of its implications or were perhaps apathetic. As a result of this over 26 million lives have been terminated before birth. How many more senseless deaths will it take before people realize that killing is not the answer to their problems? I am not going to lay down and play deaf, dumb or mute to please pro-choicers who claim "they have a right to do with their body what they want". It seems to me that they utilize this right before they became pregnant. Face it, the pro-choice people are asking for the right to legally kill. It's babies now; who will they want to kill next - husbands, fathers, daughters, grandparents, you, me.....? Think about it.

Sonda Stechuk
Romulus

Thanks for the votes

The Wayne-Westland Citizens For Education Committee thank the Wayne-Westland Community School voters who took the time to vote in the February 8th millage elections.

The 12 percent turn-out indicates that the citizens of this community are indeed "Citizens for Education".

The most important decisions, however, are not the ones of the past, but those to be made by the board of education in the near future.

Given the following recent school finance announcements:

- The estimated state equalized valuation increase for 1990 is 10 percent in Westland and 7 percent in Wayne, and;
- Governor Blanchard's proposed 14 percent budget increase for K-12 schools, and;
- The $278 million addition to the Wayne Ford Truck Plant producing $21 million new taxes over the next 12 years (of which the schools get at least 64 percent), and;

- The Patterson-Anderson November ballot proposal to guarantee specific amounts of state budget money each year for K-12 education, and;
- The legislative proposal to require 10 percent of the gross state income for education, and;

• A host of other new money bills because of the defeat of proposals A and B just prior to an election year, there will be additional monies available for the Wayne-Westland Schools.

The election is over; the people have spoken in record numbers; and now the Board of Education must listen to the voice of the people.

The people have not said, "Education is not important, give us the threatened cuts."

The people have loudly said, Education is very important, give us "NEW PRIORITIES NOT NEW TAXES!"

David F. Morantz
Citizens for Education

Dead Poet's Society for best picture. Tom Cruise for best actor, although I'd rather have Mel Gibson nominated.

Tom Cruise will be named best actor and Jessica Tandy best actress.

Tom Cruise will receive the award for best actor and Michelle Pfeiffer will win for the "The Fabulous Baker Boys."

I'd like Robin Williams to win, but I'm not sure he will. "Born on the 4th of July" will win for best movie.

Tom Cruise will win the award as best actor and "Born on the 4th of July" for best picture and Tom Cruise for best actor.

Marilyn,
just suffer
without me

Just Desserts

Sue
Willett

Marilyn Quayle is on my list. This list, which has several less-than-polite euphemistic titles is one where I place the names of people who have, in my opinion, done me serious injury or harm. While the list is kept only in my mind, I've yet to forget any name ever placed there.

Marilyn made the list when she invited me to tea at the White House. Doesn't exactly sound insulting or injurious, does it? Well, after old Marilyn invited me, she decided that she had overbooked and I would have to forego the pleasure of her company for a guided tour of the Air and Space Museum. No thanks, sweetie. I've seen the Air and Space Museum, and once is enough. Can you imagine? I'm among the disinvited.

This entire misadventure began when my devoted spouse and I registered for the National Newspaper Association Government Affairs Conference in Washington, D.C. In an effort to curry the favor of the attending publishers from across the country, the White House usually offers a briefing with the president or a visit with one of the highest-ranking lackies available during the conference time. This year, the powers that be decided Marilyn was expendable, I guess, and decided to feed her to this crowd of frenzied newshounds.

Apparently, Marilyn and her staff decided that she could only reasonably defend herself from a few of us, and after inviting the entire group, opted to limit participation in this gracious afternoon tea to a select number. I didn't make the cut due, or so they claim, to the fact that I was as dilatory as usual in registering. Of course, I did send in my completed invitation several months ago, but apparently you had to respond within 10 minutes or Marilyn took your name off the list.

Well, fine. Just fine, Marilyn. You can just take your tea and...pour it. Not that I care that I told everyone in the world that I was going to tea at the White House to impress them with my importance, and had already purchased a frame for the anticipated photo of myself in your exalted company. Not that I care or anything.

But if old Marilyn or her husband expect any favorable treatment from me the next time they commit one of their infamous gaffes, they have another thing coming. People with manners like this should not be representing me, or any other American, as far as I'm concerned. Wait until I write to Miss Manners about this one. My grandmother had a name for people who conduct themselves in this manner, Marilyn, but my mother washed my mouth out with soap when I used it.

To console myself, and the other "bumpees," I'm planning a little "tea" of my own in the hotel bar and have even planned to bake a little treat to take along for the occasion. I guarantee, we're going to have a much better time than those at the White House - well, better than the Air and Space Museum for sure. I just hope this cake goes well with gin.

CHEF'S SURPRISE

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Anna Stoltz is a cook of all trades. Last week, Stoltz's chest freezer was covered with Kifli, a flaky, Hungarian pastry. Most of it goes to friends and family.

Upstairs in her New Boston house, Stoltz stores three cookie trays of candy flowers in her oven. In there, she said, they won't collect dust before she uses them to decorate cakes.

In the next room sits another Stoltz creation, plastic bags filled with homemade egg noodles.

Stoltz lives alone, and doesn't have as many opportunities as she would like these days to cook for others. She finds excuses to cook anyway, for her son and daughter-in-law, for her friends and for her granddaughter. She often refers to her granddaughter, who is completing medical school.

Cooking is a source of satisfaction for Stoltz, who learned some of her skills just recently.

"I did it on my own because I like to do it," she said, browsing through a box of ribbons from baking competitions. "I always enter a pie for the apple contest (a traditional local event). I usually take third place."

In the Monroe Senior Olympics one year, Stoltz won a blue ribbon for cake decorating. Her son had told her she probably wouldn't win, the cake was too flowery. Now she saves that medal with her other ribbons, along with a photo of the winning cake.

Stoltz said she took a class in cake decorating in 1976, while she was still working at a factory in Plymouth. When she retired, she began working with a caterer.

Her other specialties are self-taught. Along with the Kifli, she makes chicken paprikas with dumplings, stuffed cabbage, cabbage and noodles and nut rolls.

"I make a lot of Hungarian stuff. What I don't eat I send to my kids."

Stoltz's children also reap the rewards when she makes egg noodles. The secret, she said, is working with the dough. Her recipe is simple - six eggs, a teaspoon of salt and enough flour to make a stiff dough.

She works the dough once, lets it "rest" an hour, rolls it out and runs it through one of her two noodle machines. One machine, from West Germany, clamps onto the counter like a meat grinder. Basically, it shapes and cuts the dough into strips. After drying 10 to 15 minutes, the strips can be cut by hand into the desired length. Final drying takes two days.

"I put noodles in everything, mostly chicken and beef dishes," Stoltz said.

Below are a few of Stoltz's favorite dishes. She did refuse the recipe for Kifli, but several desserts are listed.

Chicken paprikas

- 1 chopped onion
- 4 tablespoons shortening
- 1 tablespoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 teaspoon chicken base
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4-5 pounds chicken, cut up
- 1 can cream of mushroom soup
- 1 1/2 cups water

Saute onions in shortening. Cool and add paprika and seasoning, chicken, soup and water. Put in baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees one and a half hours or until done. Serve with dumplings, see recipe below.

Dumplings

- 3 eggs
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 1/2 cups flour

Mix ingredients well. Beat with a spoon. Drop by teaspoon in boiling water. Cook approximately 10 minutes.

Stuffed cabbage

- 2 pounds coarse ground pork butt
- 1 cup rice
- 1 small onion, chopped
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 teaspoon Hungarian paprika
- 1 can tomato soup
- 1 head cabbage

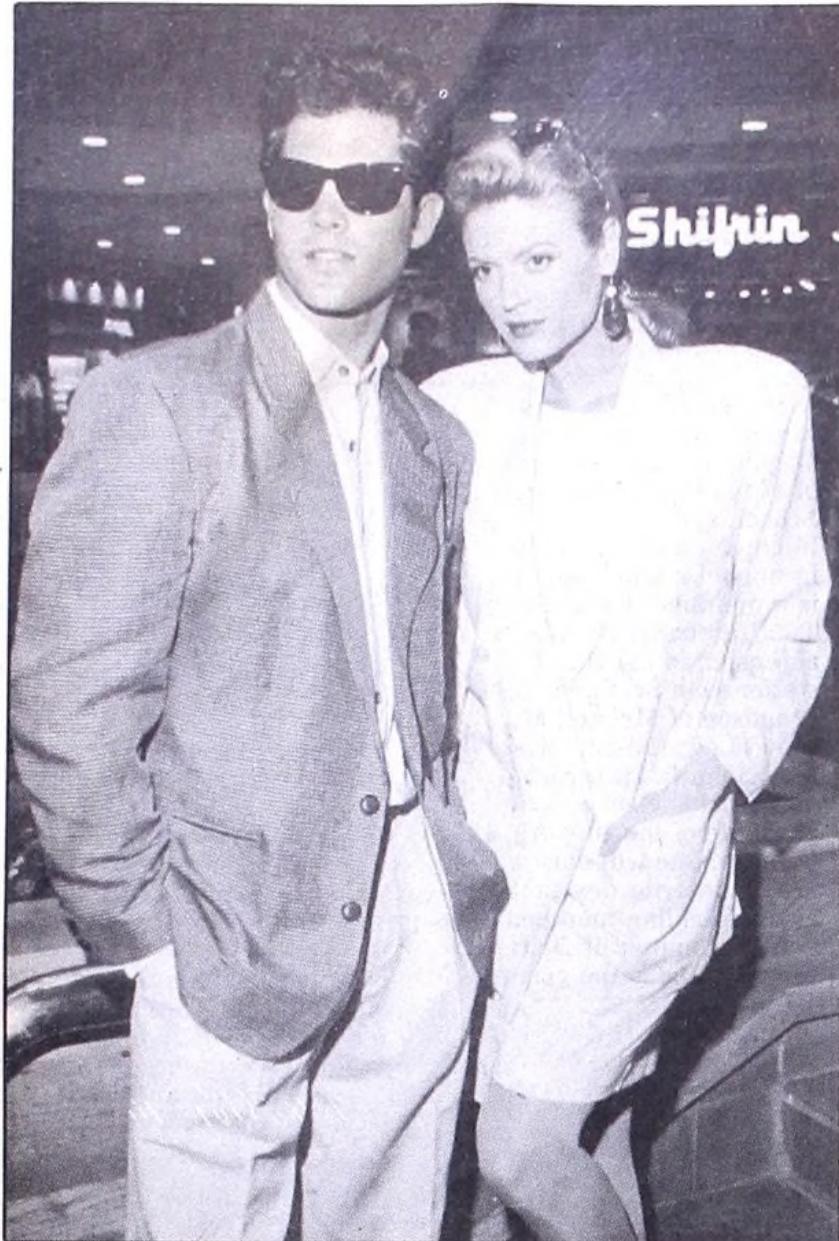

Mix all ingredients together except cabbage. Remove core from cabbage.

Fashion and soaps

The best in spring fashion and soap opera drama will meet this weekend to mark the arrival of the Easter Bunny at Westland Center. Models Dawn Baker and Mark Hyman (above) will model the newest trends in fashion from stores located in the mall. Fashion show times are 7 p.m. Friday, and 1 and 4 p.m. Saturday. Following the 1 p.m. fashion show, daytime television star Jackson Montgomery will host the Susan Lucci Look-Alike contest. Local residents who resemble "All My Children" character Erica Kane will compete for a $1,000 mall shopping spree. The Easter Bunny is also expected Saturday. All activities will be staged in the East Court of the mall. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer

ANNIVERSARY

Bailey

Philip and Delores Bailey of Belleville celebrated 38 years of marriage March 1, 1990.

They are the parents of Dennis Foster, Roxanne and Randy Kempf, Brenda and Mike Hall and Philip Bailey Jr. They have five grandchildren - Annie, Ben, Paul, Mike and Maddie.

Mr. Bailey and the former Delores Murley were married in Inkster. They have resided in Belleville 26 years.

Mr. Bailey retired from Kelsey-Hayes in 1984. He served in the military during the Korean War. Mrs. Bailey worked at Ford Motor Co. at one time, but is now employed at Willow Run Airport.

The couple celebrated their anniversary March 3 with a party at Heritage Hall. The party was hosted by their children.

Gathering at Heritage Hall were 126 people, giving the couple of honor a real surprise. Their children disguised the evening as a business meeting.

The hall was decorated with silk lilacs, iridescent balloons,

Philip and Delores Bailey

and the tables were set for a champagne toast and meal.

The couple was especially surprised to see two of their daughters who arrived from Arizona secretly. The party marked the first time the couple, their children and grandchildren had all been together.

A disc jockey provided the entertainment along with an Elvis Presley impersonator from Belleville.

Woods

Henry and Irene Woods of Hale celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Feb. 21 with an early morning breakfast at the Bear Track Inn in Augres. They also enjoyed an anniversary dinner.

The Woods are the parents of Sally Hurrelbrink of Westland and Judy Drury of Harbor Springs. They also have three grandchildren - Mark Hurrelbrink, Jim Drury and Tom Drury.

Mr. Woods is a retired inspector for Ford Motor Co.

The anniversary celebration was hosted by the couple's children.

Henry and Irene Woods

Enjoy changing season in the Upper Peninsula

Now that spring is here and safer road conditions exists, it is the perfect time to enjoy the change of seasons in the Upper Peninsula.

The long drive promises glimpses of the change from winter to spring with melting snow and the first signs of color. Spring comes a little later in the Upper Peninsula so you may even plan to enjoy some cross country skiing on your trip.

This is a perfect time of year to visit the Upper Peninsula as prices are reasonable and accommodations are usually readily available.

The time is especially perfect for sampling several of the bed and breakfast lodges and inns scattered through the area. The inns are usually less crowded now than during the busy summer and fall months, offering visitors a truly relaxed getaway.

The fast-growing trend in the hospitality industry has spread across the Upper Peninsula from Drummond Island to Ironwood, from the Keweenaw Peninsula to the Wisconsin border, according to tourism officials.

Bed and breakfast inns are often located in private homes, historical lodges and even in lighthouses. There are inns on lake shores, in villages, on a farm and at ski resorts.

A quiet bed and breakfast inn is much different from a visit in a traditional hotel. When staying in a private home, for example, a guest becomes instantly acquainted with the family operating the inn. Guests may even sit with the family during the evening hours enjoying a hot cup of tea or midnight snack. Guests will be awakened by the smell of a fresh breakfast.

Other inns may be like a visit to grandma's house, with high antique beds and big fluffy pillows. Others are in the more simple style of the 1920s with a vase of dried flowers on the linen scarf spread across the bedside table.

One bed and breakfast commands a sweeping view of Lake Huron from a third-floor crow's nest.

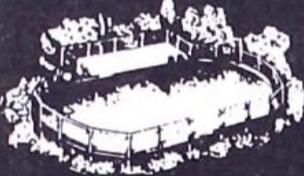

For more information and a complete listing of bed and breakfast inns call 1-800-543-2YES.

were played last night at Jackson Lumen Christi. The Rocks drew Battle Creek Central.

The loss brought the curtains down on Chris Molloy's first year as the Romulus head coach.

Molloy said he "was happy with the way the Eagles put it all together at the end of the season."

"I am very proud of these kids," Molloy said. "Our work ethics on the court and in the classrooms have improved tremendously. I will be losing some excellent players to graduation, but I know all of us are

It was one of those classical David and Goliath matchups.

But, this time, Goliath won. A small Romulus high team, slinging baskets from three-point distance, clashed with the Rocks of Plymouth-Salem Friday night, and Salem emerged with an 86-73 victory and the Class A regional basketball championships.

The victory also enabled Salem to advance to the quarterfinals of the state championship. The quarterfinals looking forward to next year."

Romulus went down shooting.

The Eagles came out against

Salem, which fielded a front line that consisted of 6-foot-6-inch Casey Kirkpatrick, 6-foot-5-inch Jake Baker and 215-pound, 6-foot-2-inch Ryan Johnson, and jumped out in front 21-12 thanks to freshman Danny Winston who scored all of his eight points in the opening period.

The stunned Salem team recovered in time to retaliate. The Rocks rallied behind Kirkpatrick, who fired in eight of his 20 points in the second period and closed the gap to one basket as the halftime whistle sounded.

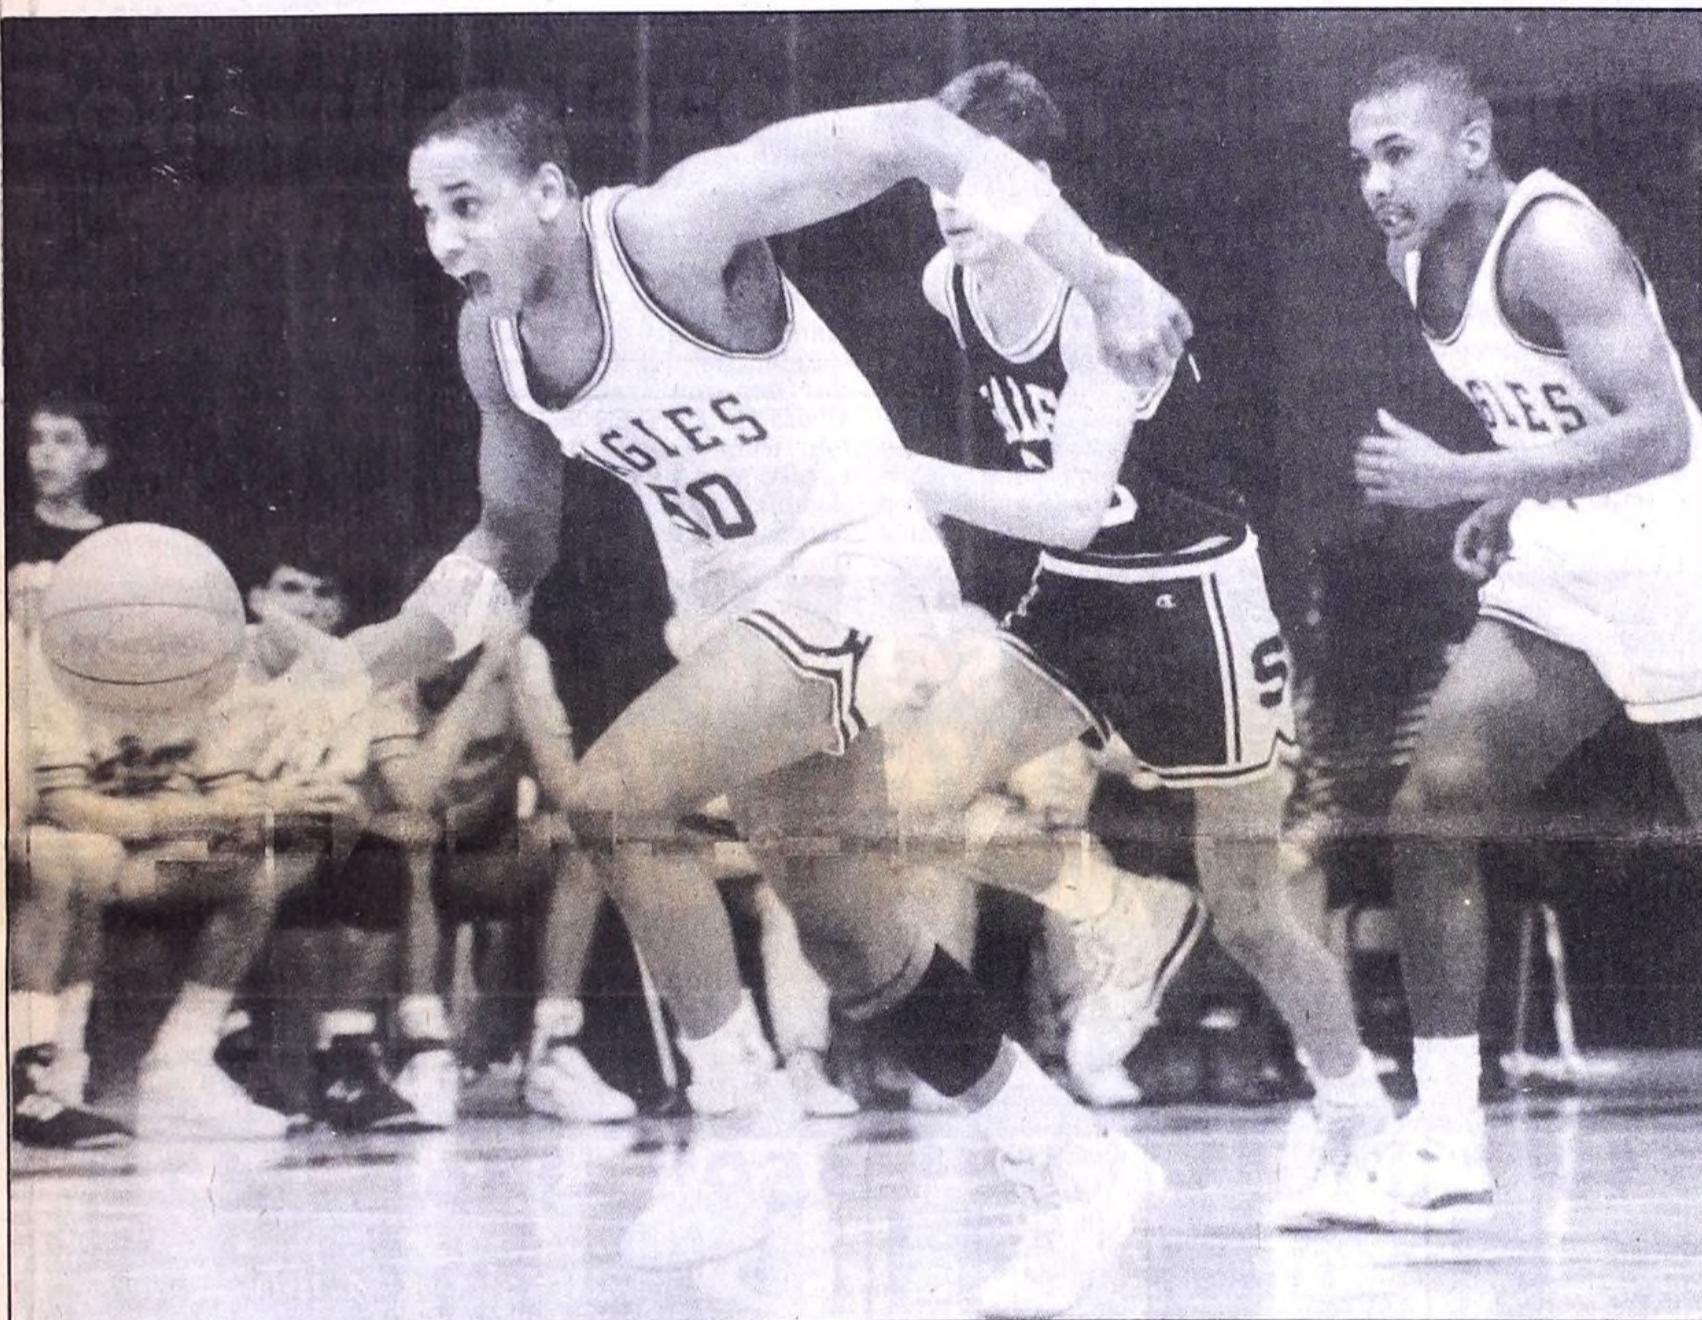

Up 40-38 at the start of what was to be their final half of the season, the Eagles were muscled off the boards by the stronger Salem players.

"We just couldn't rebound with them in that second half," Molloy said. "They dominated the boards, and, though we stayed with them in the third period, they wore us down. They put us away early in the fourth period."

Romulus trailed 61-59 heading into the last frame and never recaptured the lead as Salem outscored their rivals 25-14 in the stretch.

Sports, religious dates clash

A judge may have to decide whether a ban on high school athletic competition on a religious holiday violates the separation of church and state.

At issue is Ann Arbor Huron's ban on athletic events, specifically a football game scheduled for Sept. 28 between Huron and Adrian. Does the ban violate the First Amendment rights of the athletes and students?

Fred Coleman, athletic director at Romulus high, believes so, and he may ask the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union to challenge the ban in the courts.

September 28, a Friday, marks Yom Kippur - the Day of Atonement - a Jewish holiday, which begins at sundown. A varsity football game between Huron and Adrian has been scheduled for that night.

Ann Arbor, along with Oak Park and Southfield, have a large Jewish population. School officials in these communities have traditionally closed schools for Jewish holidays. They justify their actions by pointing out that ethnic groups, who comprise a large segment of the student population at these schools, do not attend classes during those holidays, anyway.

It is the first time in recent memory, however, that the ban on athletic activities during a religious holiday is being challenged.

Fred Coleman, athletic director at Romulus, believes the ban may violate the First Amendment.

Romulus only recently - in 1987 - officially joined the South Central Conference. Other SCC members include Ypsilanti, Adrian, Ann Arbor Huron and Ann Arbor Pioneer.

In the past, some noted athletes, such as Detroit Tiger great Hank Greenberg, refused to compete on Jewish holidays.

William Bedell, superintendent of Romulus schools, labelled the Ann Arbor Huron ban as "nonsense."

"In all the years I've been in school administration," Bedell continued, "I've never heard of such a thing. If playing in a game is against a kid's religion, then he - or she - doesn't play in the game."

This is a family's choice," Bedell added.

Most of the athletic directors in the conference were attending a meeting in Traverse City. However, the controversy, said one official, could easily be resolved "by rescheduling the game on a date that didn't conflict with the religious holiday."

"I believe that the press, especially in the second half, disrupted their game plan," Molloy said. "It forced them into turnovers that we capitalized upon."

Although Romulus managed to keep a five-point spread (48-43) at the end of the third period, the Eagles really were not in immediate danger.

"The game was not as close as the score would indicate," Molloy added.

With Davis assigned to Crump, who finished with four points for the evening, the Eagles outscored their rivals 26-23 in the final period to seal the victory.

Belleville places 3 on all-league

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Three of four swimmers who qualified for the state finals from Belleville high were named last week to the Wolverine 'A' Conference all-league team by the coaches of the league.

The recipients of all-conference accolades include: Brian Bogardus, Trevor Yeary, and Mike Bird. A fourth member of Coach Greg Cooper's team, Ed Trudo, was on the honorable mention list.

Bogardus, a senior captain, set a school record in the 100-yard freestyle after qualifying for the state finals. He covered the distance in 48.60, a new best for the Tigers.

At the state meet staged recently in Ypsilanti at Eastern Michigan University, Bogardus finished 12th in the 100-yard freestyle, and he also turned in an impressive 22.72 in the 50-yard freestyle which gave him a 24th finish overall for the event.

Teammate Mike Bird also competed at state where he was clocked in the 24th best time for the 100-yard freestyle (49.63).

Bogardus, which boasted the best 400-yard freestyle relay team in the area for 1989-90, finished with a 11-1 overall record and a second-place in the conference this year. The freestyle relay team consisted of Ed Trudo, Michael Bird, Trevor Yeary, and Bogardus, who hold the third best relay time in the history of the event at Belleville high. They have a 3:19.22 for their combined efforts.

Yeary earned an all-league berth for his 59.61 performance in the 100-yard backstroke. That gave him a silver at the conference championships.

Bogardus, one of the most versatile of Cooper's swimmers, was all-conference for his first-place finish in the 50-yard freestyle. He won the event in 22.65.

A fake sent Woodhaven's Mike McKnight (34) into the air and Romulus' Abu Hamilton to the Warrior's basket. Perkins pumped in 13 points as the Eagles flew past Woodhaven in the first-round of the regional playoffs, 86-73. However, Romulus' dream of a cinderella-like playoff ended Friday night. They were eliminated in the regional finals by Plymouth-Salem. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer

Honda offers contest, truck of the year is named

Employees of Rosenau Honda, 26429 Michigan Avenue in Inkster, have been busy sending off hundreds of entries to the Great Grocery Giveaway sponsored by the Four County Honda Dealers and Great Scott Supermarkets.

One lucky individual will have the choice of $1,000 worth of free groceries from Great Scott or the use of a 1990 Honda Civic wagon free for one year. The winner will be the contestant who most closely guesses the retail value of groceries stuffed into a Honda Civic wagon. The winner for the Rosenau dealership will be selected by the advertising agency handling the promotion.

The contest ended March 15 and Rosenau General Manager Doug Smykowsky said the response was very positive.

"Customers had a lot of fun with this promotion," he said. "I think it was very successful."

Every participating Honda dealer in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Washtenaw counties offered an identical giveaway.

Aerostar captures Motor Trend Award

Motor Trend editors have named the Ford Aerostar as its Truck of the Year for 1990.

In the April issue of the magazine, editors said "if Ford's goal was to give minivan buyers the best of all worlds with a sporty van that works hard and simply feels good to drive, then we'd consider its top-flight '90 Aerostar 4WD a sure slam dunk."

The Ford entry finished first in the quality, ride and drive, utility and function and performance categories, placing ahead of the General Motor mini-van entries, the Chevrolet Lumina APV, Pontiac Trans Sport, Oldsmobile Silhouette and GMC Safari AWD. The Aerostar 4WD also outdistanced four sport utility vehicles entered in the competition.

Motor Trend editors praised the new 4.0 liter electronic fuel-injected V-6 engine and state-of-the-art electronic four-wheel drive system of the Aerostar.

The 4.0 liter engine is standard equipment on regular and extended length Aerostars with the electronic four-wheel drive systems. It is optional on the two-wheel drive models.

The engine is the most powerful engine ever offered in a Ford compact truck. The low-end torque capabilities have increased the towing ability of the van to at least 4,600 pounds.

The all new electronic four-wheel drive is an electronically controlled system optimizing vehicle traction on all road surfaces regardless of road or weather conditions. When the road surface is slippery enough to cause a speed difference between the front and rear drive shafts, the electronic module automatically engages an electro-magnetic clutch, splitting engine torque equally between front and rear wheels for greater traction.

Under normal conditions, engine torque is split two-thirds to the rear and one-third to the front wheels.

Motor Trend editors also praised the rear-wheel, anti-lock brake system of the Aerostar. The system uses an electronic sensor and an on-board computer to help the driver stop the vehicle straight in hard braking situations. The system also inhibits complete rear-wheel lockup.

The Ford mini-van offers drivers all the trappings of comfort, too, with special Eddie Bauer option trim packages.

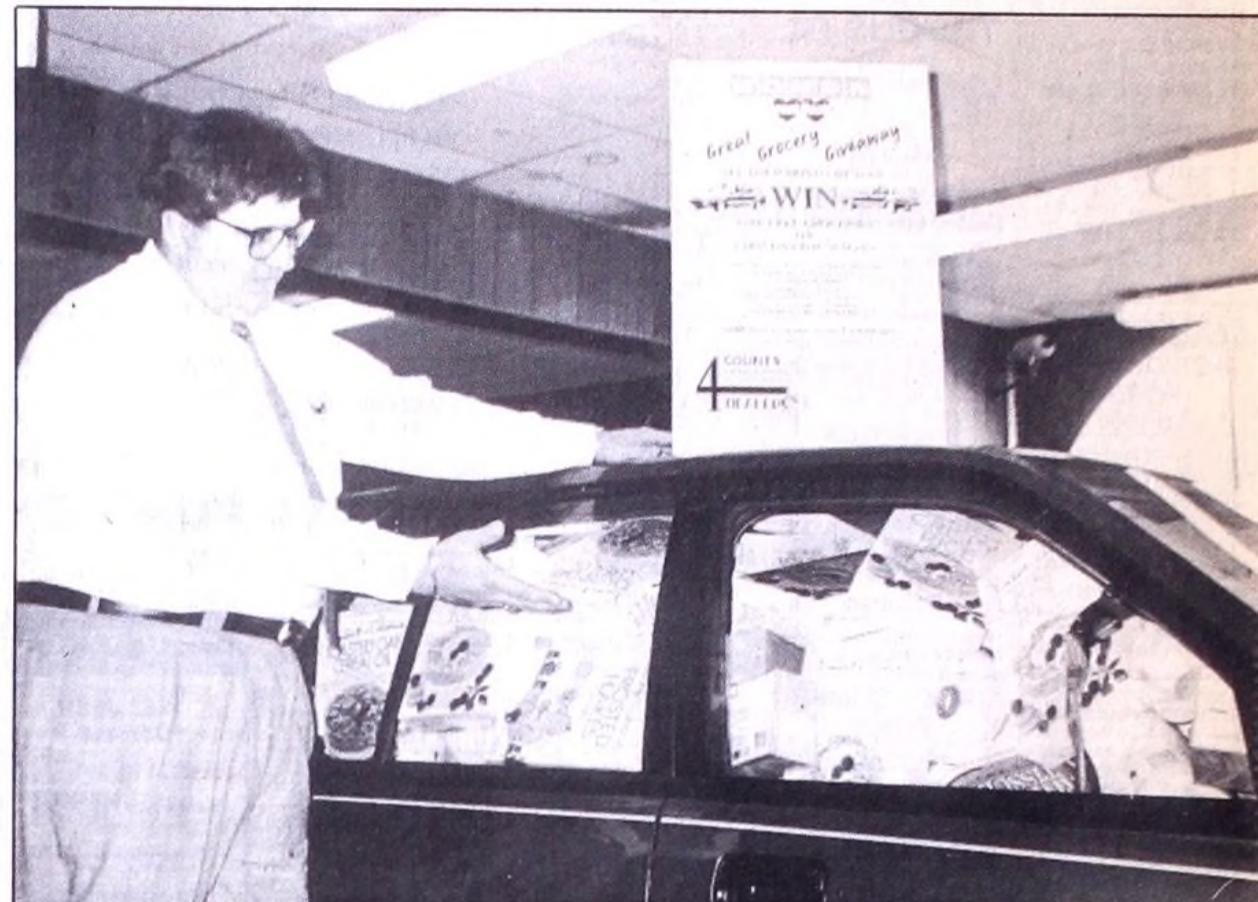

The Motor Trend story sums up the 1990 Truck of the Year winner by stating Ford has equipped "Aerostar with a responsive engine, tactile handling, abundant hauling and towing capabilities and a high degree of comfort - all the important items on a modern family's wish list."

Highway system in need of updating

The president of a nationwide group called the Highway Users Federation announced a nine-point plan to combat the deterioration of the national highway system.

America's highway transportation system is so good, Lester P. Lamm said, people tend to take it for granted. An expanding economy and growing population are pushing highway travel to unprecedented levels while government investment in aging roads and bridges is not keeping pace, Lamm said.

The Highway Users plan would replace the federal highway program when it expires in 1991, if approved. It calls for $21.8 billion per year in federal Area Honda dealers are sponsoring a contest in which winners will have their choice of free groceries or use of a Honda automobile. spending on the highway system, but, read my lips, no new taxes.

Funding would come mainly from an unspent $17 billion in the Federal Highway Trust Fund.

Some of the goals of the plan are to reduce traffic congestion in urban areas, ensure highway bridge safety and encourage high-tech "smart cars" to make driving safer and more efficient.
